

The Mulberry Leaf

What is it?

Common name: Mulberry Leaf, Morus Leaf, White Mulberry Leaf

Latin name: Morus Alba Linn

The Mulberry Leaf is a unique plant that can provide added support to your Type II diabetes care or the care of someone you love. Best known as the food for silkworms, Mulberry Leaf has been used in Eastern medicine for centuries.

Managing Type II diabetes and staying healthy can be a challenge. Eating the right foods, exercising regularly, and taking medication is often needed to keep blood glucose levels under control.

Today new techniques can help. Certain foods and supplements can assist in the process. One of those supplements is the Mulberry Leaf. Diabetics and doctors alike are beginning to see tremendous benefits of this helpful plant.

The Herb of the Era

How does it work?

One of the most unique qualities of the Mulberry Leaf is that it contains an effective compound called 1-deoxynojirimycin (1-DNJ) which:

- ✓ Inhibits carbs, starches, and sucrose absorption
- ✓ Prevents intestinal enzymes from passing sugars into the bloodstream
- ✓ Lowers overall calorie intake

As a natural supplement, the Mulberry Leaf doesn't just stop at improving blood glucose levels. Full of antioxidants, high levels of protein, iron, calcium, vitamins A, B's, and C, Mulberry Leaf also has the potential to lower cholesterol and reduce fatty buildup along the arteries— a great health benefit for anyone!

Some Mulberry Leaf Facts:

- ✓ Up to 28% Protein
- ✓ 25 times more calcium than milk
- ✓ 10 times more iron than spinach
